You are responsible for finding an interesting word-of-the-day to encourage participants to use new vocabulary. You will keep a record of the use of this word, other interesting uses of language, and any misuses of language as well.

Before the meeting

- Find an interesting word and its definition to share with the participants. Look for a word that is a useful, descriptive word.

At the meeting

- Before the meeting starts write the word and definition on the whiteboard.
- When called on by the chairman, introduce your word, what it means and give the group an example of how this word is used in a sentence.
- As the meeting proceeds, write down the name of all participants at the meeting and record how often they use the word.
- Record interesting language or misuses of language.
- When asked by the General Evaluator for your report, stand at your seat and give your report. Report on how often the word was used and by whom, as well as misuses of language you heard and particularly good, or attention getting uses of language.
- (Time is 1 min.)
